Grampian: Better than Ever A glance at the notes from yesterday's Grampian match between Aberdeen and Partick Thistle gives an indication of the continued strength of Grampian rugby. It is an historic record, when you consider how far it has come in the last 30 years and, with the emergence of many of the next generation, including GWS Giants halfback Toby Greene. In the match report on the Perth Wildcats' stunning victory over the Hawks at the Murrayfield Ice Arena on Friday night, the Australian press were reviewing the game of their Australian team. And one of the main themes of the review was the continued decline in the quality of the opposition the Aussies were up against as Australia played its first games in Scotland. That seems to be the theme of Saturday's Grampian game. First up, in the post, Robin Copeland wrote of the arrival of an Aberdeen side playing with the sort of
