Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a printing press with a single print unit, more particularly to a single-print press for feeding printing units of various shapes, sizes and numbers. 2.
Description of the Prior Art As well known, a printing press has more than one print unit and a drive system is provided for movement of each print unit. Movement of each print unit is done by a track and a motor, with a drive shaft being located on each print unit. This requires a space for the track and motors, and a track for each unit. Some printing presses employ a flat track for each unit. However, such a track is horizontal, which permits the units to get in a biased position relative to each other.
Accordingly, it is necessary for a worker to manually reorientate the units into the correct position. As disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,073,224, U.S. Pat.
No. 4,348,255, and U.S. Pat. No. 4,621,456, some printing presses have a mobile print unit that is easily handled so that the print units of different shapes and sizes can be moved at the same time. However, the mobile unit is always located on the side and is not suitable for an application where printing is done on both sides of a piece of paper. U.S. Pat. No.
4,079,074 discloses a printing press with a push-type print unit. This unit includes a cylindrical bed for receiving a cylinder. The push-type print unit is mobile and can be selectively positioned in front of or behind a conventional printing unit so that the linear print from the conventional print unit will be guided to the cylindrical bed of the push-type print unit.
However, the cylinder bed has the diameter of the print unit to be replaced, and only one print unit of one shape and size can be located on the bed. Accordingly, the primary object of the present invention is to provide a single-print press which includes a general purpose frame, a first print
