Zooming in with Retouching Sometimes the big image isn't large enough to see exactly what you want to see. Maybe you want a close-up of something. Maybe you want to examine the details of the image. Perhaps you want to remove a distracting dust spot from your photo. In these cases, the zoom tool is your friend. When you zoom in, you can * Move the focus of the image by rotating the three-cursor box at the center of the screen, which enables you to zoom in on any part of the image. * Click and drag to make the image larger or smaller, change the perspective (to turn the image into a portrait or landscape format), and rotate the image.

The main difference between Elements and professional version is the number of filters available. Elements is missing certain features such as the ability to apply gradients to pictures, only contains a small number of portrait art filters, and the number of available adjustments are limited. Adobe Photoshop is a complex program, and most photographers don't do a lot of photo editing these days. Since Adobe Photoshop is an advanced tool for editing images, some people think it's too complicated or just too much trouble. Adobe Photoshop is an extremely useful tool to have, but it can be overwhelming. Photoshop is the most powerful software available for graphic design, photo editing and image creation, but it is also a very complex application. Are you using Photoshop? Why or why not? How complicated is Photoshop? How many people do you think are using Photoshop? Let us know in the comments below. Read Next!The Oklahoma-based Freedom From Religion Foundation has sent a letter to the Department of Transportation (DOT) to question why an Oklahoma City schoolteacher who has stated she is a "relentless atheist" is not being allowed to display a poster in her classroom that featured an image of an "American Atheist" award. Janna Kunz, a third-grade teacher at Holt Elementary, has received several complaints since posting the photograph of the atheist award on her classroom door, noting that her school was the only one in Oklahoma with an American Atheist plaque on the wall. Upon receiving the complaints, the school district requested Kunz remove the photo, which she said she would gladly do in the near future. FFRF contends that this order, issued by the district superintendent, is contrary to equal access in religion education. "By allowing only students enrolled at James R. Faust Elementary to display the image on their classroom doors, the district is violating the principle of equal access in religion education," FFRF Legal Fellow Andrew Seidel writes to Mary Anderson, Interim Superintendent for the Oklahoma City Public Schools. As an atheist, Kunz has an expectation of a "neutral and inclusive environment, free from religious indoctrination," FFRF adds. "The district's decision to restrict secular displays in the presence of students highlights the need for equal access in religion education," Seidel writes. "No one should be required to participate in a religious ceremony, or be exposed to religious

Brushes A brush is the most versatile tool in Photoshop. There are two categories of brushes: Drawn Drawn brushes use brush settings that affect the brush itself rather than the pixels. However, you can change the size, spacing, and shape of the brush using the Brush Preset Picker. Sketch The sketch brush is the default brush in the brush toolbox. It can be used for soft, fine lines in a variety of colors. Click the Pixel Preview button to see what you're applying. The Ink Sketch brush uses the same settings that you use for the Sketch brush, with one exception: you can use it only in the Sketch dialog box. You can also adjust the settings of an existing brush by selecting Brush Preset Picker from the Brush menu and choosing a brush from the list. You can also create your own custom brushes by using the Magic Wand tool to select an area and copying and pasting that selection in the Brush toolbox. The color of a drawn or a sketch brush can be changed by clicking the color bar in the toolbox or on the bar located to the right of the brush in the Control Bar. Brush Tip Settings As with any brush tool, there are several options that control the appearance of the brush. These settings, which are found in the Options bar, appear only if the tool is currently selected. Tip: Make sure that the Smoothing and Interpolation settings are selected if you have a newer version of Photoshop. Otherwise, they are grayed out. When the settings are selected, click the Crop tab to see the Crop box. You can use the Gradient tool to create a gradient, which you can apply to the Toolbox. For more information about gradients, see the Gradient tool discussed in the next section. When you click OK, the Properties box appears. You can either apply the settings to the current brush by clicking the Accept button or to all brushes in the Toolbox by clicking the Apply to All button. Tip: If you want to make permanent changes to the tool or you're switching from one tool to another, click the Save Settings button in the Options bar. Tools Select the Pen tool (appears when you click the Pencil icon in the Toolbox). The Pen tool can be used to draw simple shapes and freehand lines in any color. If

Q: On-resize event is calling always once in window I have an on-resize event is fired whenever the window is resized. After page load if there is no network, on-resize event is fired once, if the network gets connected on-resize event is not fired again on-resize. I used on-resize event to fire my function to refresh/update the data.
jQuery(window).on("resize", function(event) { //Calls after page load, on resize event called once, after network gets connected it is fired after getting connected once. if (window.location.pathname === "/") { jQuery("#FileContent").val(fileContent); jQuery("#LogFileContent").val(logFileContent); } }); A: There is no "off" event for window.resize.
What you can do is test the resolution of the window, to do this you can use this code. if (window.innerWidth || window.innerHeight) Hope this helps jQuery(window).on("resize", function(event) { //Calls after page load, on resize event called once, after network gets connected it is fired after getting connected once. if (window.location.pathname === "/") { jQuery("#FileContent").val(fileContent); jQuery("#LogFileContent").val(logFileContent); } }); function autofit() { if (window.innerWidth
