Q: Reading lines from text file to List[string] C# I'm trying to read lines from a text file to a list of strings. The text file only has a few lines. This is what I tried: using (StreamReader r = File.OpenText("TextFile.txt")) { string line; while ((line = r.ReadLine())!= null) { string[] chunk = line.Split(Environment.NewLine); foreach (string item in chunk) { ListBox.Items.Add(item); } } } but as I mentioned earlier, the lines in this text file only have a couple of lines. A: Since you have only a couple of lines of text, you're going to be reading into memory what would be essentially just a bunch of garbage. If you stored the lines in a text file, opened it and read the contents of the file instead of using a StreamReader, you wouldn't have to worry about manually setting up that StreamReader (which is a lot of code for only a few lines of text). Additionally, your foreach loop isn't going to do what you seem to think it does - you're only adding the first item to the listbox. Here's what you should do: List chunks = File.ReadLines("TextFile.txt") .SelectMany(line => line.Split(Environment.NewLine))
