(Reuters) - More than half a million new songs have been uploaded to the Internet in the last five years, according to a report by the U.S. National Music Publishers Association. The report estimates that over 631 million songs were uploaded to the Internet in the three-month period from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2010. The association's report, titled "The State of the Music Industry: A Look Back at the 2010 NRBJ Top 50 and Future Outlook," showed that artists wrote and recorded 559,000 new songs last year -- the most since 2007. "The next record has been set by the average age of the content being created in 2010 -- 39 years of age. That's a record, too," said Pat Thompson, NMPA's president and chief executive officer, in a statement released on Thursday. "On a global basis we are seeing a new world of music come into being," Thompson added. "The number of new songs uploaded to the Internet grew the first time in four years and the average age of the songs being uploaded is growing as well, with more than half of the new uploads being less than 15 minutes in length.” The report also Logix Pro 500 Plc Simulator Crack >> Plc Simulator Logixpro Allen Bradley (I, Logix Pro v1.6 1Q: How do I set up a two-factor authentication for my App Engine application? For Google App Engine, there are two different types of two-factor authentication. As I understood it, the first one is OAUTH, and the second one is TOTP. According to this GAE documentation: OAuth 2.0 Google Account and Two-Step Authentication: OAuth is a protocol for authorization. A user grants a web application access to their Google Account data, such as emails, contacts, and calendars. The user grants access through a client-side application, such as a Gmail application, or with a browser-based application. This is a simplified version of OAuth 2.0 that uses a yubikey, push tokens, or a basic authentication. The yubikey does not use a shared secret, but rather public key verification. A user must enter a password for access to their Google Account data. This password is used as the base secret to generate tokens. A token is an encrypted string that can be used to verify that a user is logging in correctly. TOTP Generate new token with Google Accounts every 60 seconds TOTP is an OAuth 2.0 2-step verification protocol to help protect against account takeover. With TOTP, a user must enter their Google password and a new TOTP token is generated every time it expires. The user is required to regenerate their TOTP at least every 60 seconds. This 60 second period can be up to 12 hours in the past. This allows a user to recover access to their account even if an attacker steals their TOTP secret and the server clock isn't synchronized properly. What I understood from this is that when OAUTH is used, users are asked to provide credentials for the first time when they login
