Bandai Namco will release the Fantasy Action RPG The Tarnished Prince (working title) for PlayStation 4 and PlayStation Vita in Japan on October 24, 2016, the company announced. As revealed in the magazine CoroCoro Comic 2015, The Tarnished Prince will be a cross-platform game that can be played on PlayStation 4, PlayStation Vita, Nintendo 3DS, and PSP, and in addition to the protagonist, there will also be other characters and cute girls who work alongside him. Players will move their character between three different worlds connected via a sea of water. The game's world will have a three-dimensional feel where not only do the backgrounds change with each playthrough, but the game's storyline will also be different depending on the order in which players decide to take their turn. The game is being developed for a Windows PC release but Bandai Namco is not yet providing a release window. Fighting against the mage Liliana, the twin swordsman turned necromancer joins the fight. Even the charming Devil, hiding behind a glamorous facade, will appear in the battle. Prizes await you, like further lands or a showdown against the old enemy.

The election of a new mayor for New Orleans, the upcoming elections to the Legislature, the re-election bid of a governor, etc. In the city of New Orleans, there are other local, mayoral elections, planned elections and one special election. Here is some information on the political races in New Orleans and what the candidates plan to spend their money on if elected. For the mayoral race, there will be three candidates, and the race is wide open for most of the city. Ed Foret is the incumbent and has served in the office since 1998. His opponent is City Councilman and businessman Melvin C. Banks. Banks has the strongest campaign organization and has the money to spend in order to run a successful campaign. Foret, the incumbent, is an unknown at this point. His only track record for this campaign is that he is a voice of the city and is the incumbent. The next race is the city council elections, where there will be 17 seats up for re-election
