[TORRENT] all is well hindi 720p hdrip dvdripAs anxiety and fear rise, the markets fall — and then, just when fear finally subsides and the markets begin to recover, the government throws another stimulus in our faces. This, again, is nothing new. There are thousands of such little farts of stimulus that every year — every single one of them — does nothing but suck the life out of the economy. But now we're just getting to a point where the game has grown so far beyond our capacity that it no longer has any value. So let's start with this little stunt from yesterday: The White House said President Barack Obama's plan to cut the federal budget deficit by $4 trillion over the next decade will require $2.2 trillion of new taxes. There's two things I want you to take away from this: 1.) Obama has no idea where his trillion-dollar number comes from. 2.) Obama knows that this is an arbitrary number; a number he needs to "get it done" while he's still President. So we'll just take $2.2 trillion off the table and leave the rest. That's $2.2 trillion of tax increases, and I don't know anyone who can pay that much tax. So that's definitely off the table. But then there's this: "We need to substantially get our fiscal house in order," he said at a news conference with the leaders of both chambers of Congress. What, Obama's fiscal house can't handle a trillion dollars? Oh, I'm sure it can, Mr. President. It's just an arbitrary number that just happens to be big enough to get your name in the paper. The Washington Post gives you the gameplan. And if you want to get an even bigger "hit" on Obama's article — and the Washington Post thinks this is a good idea — read on! And now comes the poster child for my entire argument. It is, by definition, the highest priced stimulus ever. Let's look at the facts: This is an immediate stimulus that, like previous ones, will buy back nothing and therefore have zero impact. 6d1f23a050
