The canine anterior pituitary (AP) and the cell culture technique were used to study the release of endogenous and exogenously secreted growth hormone (GH). In these studies, the effects of other hormones and various drugs on GH release from AP were evaluated. Basal GH release from all dogs was significantly inhibited by graded doses of thyrotropin releasing hormone (TRH) and goldthioglucose (GTG) in culture. When animals were pretreated with either l-dopa, naloxone or cocaine, the GH responses to both TRH and GTG were attenuated. In contrast, exogenous GH release and thyrotrophin (TSH) responses to TRH and GTG were attenuated in animals pretreated with either l-dopa or cocaine, but not with naloxone. These results suggest that TRH- and GTG-induced release of GH is inhibited through the release of endogenous opioid peptides and dopaminergic antagonists from the AP.Q: Passing array from controller to another directive in angularjs I am trying to pass an array from my controller to my directive.
