ITV Sport Review - The Magicians

If you get tired of the boring and archaic 'news' coverage of the Premiership, then check this out: The Magicians. A few weeks ago ITV got rid of all of their live magazine programmes from last season and replaced them with an over-simplified news service. Obviously the reasoning is that as a consumer of news you don't need to hear about the match day topics and annoying commentary that they had. I think it's a little sad that despite all of their programming tactics designed to make everything seem modern they've not even attempted to reinvent their news service. Instead of broadcasting live magazine programmes they've replaced them with an hour of pre-recorded weekly magazine programmes that we watch at home or on our devices. It's hard to know what the reasoning behind this was but since it's always gone out at 6.30pm on a Sunday night this offers a family viewing option. TV used to be family viewing but, well most of it any way, but there are still some key programmes that are too adult (i.e. too) for children. Super Sunday Football on Sunday nights and Ashes Cricket on Fridays and Saturdays are great examples. So it's nice to have another option. We're not normally the biggest fans of new series but the makers of The Magicians, a supernatural drama, have made a strong case for it. Based on the book series by Neil Gaiman and having a well established main cast of misfit teenagers they've got a great formula to work with. Of course "magicians" are a different type to the "magic" that viewers have come to expect from the BBC programmes.
